DON'T LET

PESTS

SEND YOU

PACKING

Keeping costs down is an important part of running any business. But without effective pest control, pests could send you packing.

Food is precious cargo.

With 5 million cases of food poisoning in Australia each year, distribution, storage, packing & transport companies are under increasing pressure to make sure they are pest free.

Too often we hear stories of pests making their way into boxes, other storage, and transport containers, destroying food and causing all manner of havoc.

Besides the ever-growing threat of litigation, the risk of losing a large contract due to the discovery of pests could be devastating to a business; not to mention your safety responsibility to your employees.

But prevention is always better than cure.

Murray Pest Control offers risk assessments to help you understand the impact of pests in your business, so you can offer your clients the confidence that their stock is in good hands.

Don't let pests send you packing. Speak with Murray Pest Control about a food standards risk assessment of your business.
